

Press Release

Contact: David A. Robinson, Ph.D.
President, AICE

Email: info@aice-eval.org

Subject: Standards and Best Practices

For immediate release

Beverly Hills, CA, March 10, 2014: The Association of International Credential Evaluators (AICE), the professional membership association for international credentials evaluation in the U.S., is pleased to announce the publishing of unified standards and best practices for its members.

Dr. Robinson, President of AICE, indicated, "the development of Standards and Best Practices has been the mission of the association since its inception. AICE is committed to addressing the needs of the international credential evaluation profession and is the first association to publish and enforce consistent standards for every member. We look forward to collaborating with other associations who share a similar vision."

Established in 1998, AICE is currently the only professional membership association for international credentials evaluation in the U.S. with standards for expert qualifications, methodologies and documentation. Another major part of the Association's mission is to provide the general public with access to trustworthy credential evaluation research and experts. In addition to meeting the Association's standards, AICE's members continuously communicate and collaborate to ensure the accuracy of credential evaluations and promote better understanding of the world's different education systems.

AICE-certified member organizations are: Academic Credentials Evaluation Institute, Inc.; American Education Research Corporation; Foreign Credential Evaluations, Inc.; Globe Language Services, Inc. International Evaluation Services; Lisano International; SDR Educational Consultants.

For more information on AICE and the Standards document, please visit www.aice-eval.org.

###